war's crimson wave. The subject of this memorisi, Ozro F. Quiggle, son of Calvin Quiggle, Ai. Fultan Co., Ohio, formerly of Humbden. Gesaga Co., was among the first to enlist in defense of the Old Flag. After bravely enduring the toil and danger of war for three years, he corolled his name as a veteran in Co. I, 14th Reg., O. V. V. I., with the band of noble patriots whose devotion and bravery we delight to honor .-Toil and privation were endured by him without a murmur or compliance, without a murmur or compliance, and the 21st year of his age; when he was shot near Milledgeville, Ga. His loss is deeply edy used in his case. Sufferers wishing to profit by the house of the happy to turn. The happy Spring, Chicksmauge, Mission Ridge, and other engagements, his conduct was brave and meritorious. But a patriot's grave has at last received the war-worn soldier. The tears of his affectionate parents may never moisten the sod that covers the last restingplace of their loved one; and roses, planted by the hand of a touder sister, may never bloom upon his lonely grave, over which the pine and cypress cast their sombre shade. The rolling drum or the thrilling notes of the bugle will never again disturb his deep slumber. The home threshold will echo his familiar tread no more, for the loved one is gene-and Dreamless is his peaceful slumber,

In his lonely Southern grave, There the sombre pine and cypress, O'er his tomb in sadness wave.

Tho' no flower may twine in beauty O'er the loved one early slain, Memory weaves a brighter garlan d 'Round our youthful soldier's name. J. L. YEAMAN.
